cornforth white

BY FARROW & BALL

"We were looking for something more interesting than all white on the cabinets, and this shade of gray—with just a little blue in it—worked perfectly with the blue pebble tile floor. We've used this color a lot in kitchens and bathrooms because it goes so well with tile and marble."

—Phoebe Howard, Mrs. Howard, Jacksonville, FL

"This is the upstairs den in my house, where my family cozies up to watch movies, and I chose this deep red to make the room feel more intimate. This was the first time I'd used it, but I've turned to it again and again for my clients, and people always love it."

buttered sweet corn

"When I found this bench at a street market in London, it was a horrible brown shade. I painted it white, but since then it's been many colors—eggplant, pink, green, blue, and now yellow. It sits in the hallway leading to my living room. I like when you turn a corner and something surprises you."

—Heidi Greenacre, Boho Interiors, Berkhamsted, England
